

Sara Koopman

Professor of Kent State University

Graduate Seminar

“Thinking About, Thinking For, and Thinking with Social Change Activists”

Monday, February 4th ♦ 12:30 - 1:30pm ♦ 286A University Hall

Please RSVP to Elysse Jones at jones.6187@osu.edu. Space is limited.

Lecture

“What Does a Feminist Peace Look Like?

Colombia’s Struggles Over the World’s Most Inclusive Peace Accord”

Monday, February 4th ♦ 3:30 - 5:00pm ♦ Psychology Building Room 014

Dr. Sara Koopman is a Professor in the School of Peace & Conflict at Kent State University. Earning her PhD in Human Geography from the University of British Columbia, Dr. Koopman mainly focuses on feminist political geography in her research, including alternative securities, international accompaniment, gender and security, peacebuilding in Colombia, and social movements and solidarity. Specifically, her work explores global North-South solidarity efforts, how it can fall into colonial patterns, and how it can be decolonized.

Please visit wgss.osu.edu/events for more information about her lecture and graduate seminar.

Events co-sponsored by the Mershon Center Peace Studies Program and the Department of Geography