

The Geographic Science Program at James Madison University (JMU) invites applications for a non-tenure track visiting assistant professor position beginning August 2015 for a one-year appointment.

The dynamic and rapidly growing Geographic Science Program serves approximately 180 majors and over 1,000 students each year in general education courses. The degree program (B.A. or B.S.) is part of the Department of Integrated Science and Technology. JMU is a comprehensive university, with an enrollment of approximately 18,000 undergraduate and 2,000 graduate students, located in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley two hours from Washington, D.C., Richmond and Roanoke. With a motto of 'Be the Change,' JMU is regarded as one of the finest universities in the nation and has been cited in the U.S. News and World report, Changing Times and Money Magazine as an outstanding public university. Additional information on the Geographic Science Program can be found at <http://www.gs.jmu.edu>.

The Geographic Science Program seeks a Geographer with expertise in one or more areas of GIScience such as: cartography, Internet-GIS, geovisualization, spatiotemporal modeling, real-time GIS and big data. The successful candidate will be expected to teach introductory through advanced courses in cartography and GIS.

Only applicants with a demonstrated ability to work effectively and collegially as part of an interdisciplinary team, and who demonstrate a commitment to excellence in undergraduate teaching and research, will be considered. An earned Ph.D. in Geography is preferred at the time of appointment.
